QRU Day Trading A-Z Academy

Day Trading Is a Decision System

Day trading is the practice of buying and selling financial instruments within a short time period, often within the same trading day. But real understanding goes deeper than clicking buy or sell.

The QRU Trading Intelligence Model

1. Knowledge

Understand the system.

2. Analysis

Interpret market information.

3. Decision

Choose an action based on a plan.

4. Risk

Protect resources during uncertainty.

5. Reflection

Review, learn, and improve.

Core Vocabulary

Asset: Something that has value, such as stocks, currencies, or commodities.

Market: A system where buyers and sellers exchange value.

Volatility: How much and how quickly prices move.

Liquidity: How easily something can be bought or sold.

Strategy: A planned method for making decisions.

Risk Management: Protecting resources by planning for uncertainty.

Probability: Understanding possible outcomes and their likelihood.

Key Truths

No one can predict every market movement.

A losing trade is not always a bad decision.

Emotions influence trading behavior.

Discipline matters because uncertainty is always present.

Financial education does not guarantee profits. It helps people understand systems and make informed decisions.

Memory Sentence

Trading is not about controlling the market. It is about controlling the quality of your decisions.
